REPRESENTATIVE TRANSACTIONS

Corporate Governance Issues: Serves as outside general counsel to some of California's largest foundations and charities, advising boards on issues related to conflicts of interest, compensation, directors' and officers' liability, member and director voting rights, nonprofit best practices and compliance with statutory requirements, such as the California Nonprofit Integrity Act.

Tax Audits: Represented individuals in an IRS excess benefit audit involving compensation received from a charity based on a percentage of sales contract. Achieved settlement at IRS Appeals resulting in a significantly reduced assessment, and assisted clients in obtaining refunds of taxes previously paid on the disallowed income.

Joint Ventures and For-Profit Subsidiaries: Represented international human rights organization in structuring joint ventures with for-profit organizations and establishing for-profit subsidiaries to conduct various revenue-raising business activities.

Charitable Giving: Represented major California hospital in structuring a complex gift and negotiating and drafting the gift agreement. Total gift included a combination of immediate and deferred gifts of cash, stock and real property in exchange for building and center naming rights. Significant tax issues included retained life estate, bargain sale and debt-financed unrelated business taxable income.

California Property Tax Exemption: Represented large museum in connection with welfare and museum exemption issues related to temporarily unused property, offsite warehouse leased from a for-profit party and occasional rental of premises for corporate events.

Charitable Trust: Represented foundation controlled by a for-profit entity in a California Attorney General audit involving alleged self-dealing, breach of charitable trust and failure to adhere to fundraising regulations. Matter was amicably resolved, with the foundation agreeing to institute better corporate governance procedures and the related for-profit entity agreeing to reimburse certain expenditures to the foundation.
